'Ike' Appears Satisfied on First Stops

Brussels, Belgium, Jan. 10 — (AP) — The first two stops on his 10-nation tour of Western Europe have left Gen. Dwight D. Eisenhower "reasonably well satisfied" with his survey of defense prospects.

This summary of his findings on his defense survey in France and Belgium was made by one of the general's associates as the Atlantic pact commander moved into closing meetings of his stay in Belgium before moving on to Holland.

He had at least one bright reason for being happy: In spite of the fulminations of the Communist press, a large crowd gathered in front of the Hotel Metropole last night and cheered him as he left for dinner with U. S. Ambassador Robert Murphy.

The showing was in contrast to the apathetic reaction of non-Communist Paris crowds to the five-star general's return to that city five years after his armies had liberated it from Hitler.

DOROTHY DIX Independent Children

Dear Miss Dix: We agree with you that children should be taught independence and to use their own judgment, but don't you think that parents should have the privilege of advising and consulting with the children? We have some adopted children who resent our every inquiry into their affairs and who seem to think that we should make no suggestions to them; that our only duty is to finance them, give them clothes and cars and the money with which to amuse themselves.

MRS. T. J. D.
Answer: Teaching children to stand alone mentally and morally should be done just exactly as they are taught how to stand on their own feet and to walk physically. The toddler needs his parent's hand to hold him steady and to teach him how to take the first step. He needs to be taught what dangers to avoid and how to pick himself up when he stumbles and try it again when he falls down.

Mind Needs Training
And he needs the same mental training. No child can know of himself what to eat, when to go to bed, what to study at school, how to handle money, how to get along with other children. All these things have to be taught, and it is chiefly through the parent's advice that the younger learns how to handle himself and acquires judgment and wisdom.

Just as a little child is taught to walk by exercising the muscles of its legs, so it should be taught independence and self-reliance and wisdom by being permitted to exercise its mind and make its own decisions under the parent's guiding hand. Parents should not more do all of their children's thinking for them than they should carry them around in their arms after they are old enough and strong enough to stand on their own feet.

Successful parenthood consists in fathers and mothers keeping such close companions with their children that their children will confide in them and voluntarily ask their advice and guidance after they really have been emancipated from parental control. Experience will have taught them that Mother and Father are nearly always right about things, and that they can depend upon their understanding of all of their problems and dealing with them with sympathy.

Dear Miss Dix: I had been secretly married to a very likeable young man for about six months when a married man in the same office where I work started making love to me. This sweet me off my feet so much that I divorced my husband. Now I am thrown over by the married man and learn that he has an affair such as mine every two months. I have repented my folly plenty and would give anything to have my husband back. Although he is heartbroken and would take me back I don't think it would be the right thing to do because if he knew what a cheat I have been he wouldn't want me. I am only 19 and I would like to shoot every married man who flirts with a girl.

DISILLUSIONED
Answer: He deserves it, but what about doing something lethal to a public response to Eisenhower was a demonstration yesterday against his visit by about 4,000 Communists. The Reds failed, however, in their advertised plans to tie up the city with a strike.

Eisenhower's schedule for today included a series of more or less formal calls and one work session. In rapid succession he was to call briefly on the prince royal, 20-year-old Baudouin, Premier Joseph Paul Van Zeeland, chairman of the North Atlantic Treaty organization.

Fair
Enough

By Westbrook Pegler
Copyright, 1950
By King Features Syndicate

New York, Jan. 9 — The Communists have not exhausted their skill as a weapon of black mail and suppression, but as the treason becomes more blatant to the people who seek up justice, the jeopardy of the patriot who speaks out is diminishing. However, efforts have been made to throttle the press by other means in such cases.

In Washington, recently, Senator Paul Douglas, of Illinois, a Democrat, of course, inveighed against severe treatment of small attorneys in public conduct. It would be easy to agree with Senator Douglas if he would admit that the attorney has been a specialty of a whole crop of professional blackguards in the service of his own party.

A senator of real stature would not have hesitated to name the notorious rascals who rushed out of cabinet meetings to blast the vicious distortions to the gangsters of under-world journalism, for the evil conduct was a matter of common knowledge long ago. Unquestionably this infidelity has been responsible for the debasement of professional standards, with editors sharing the guilt, of course.

A senator of real stature, who ventured to address the subject at all, would not flinch from exposing the conspiracy which poured forth on the radio and in print such a vile torrent of lies about the late Jim Forrestal, in the interests of an unknown foe, that he was driven out of a window to his death.

But we see here a want of the same force and courage that Senator Joe McCarthy, a Republican, has shown in unmasking Drew Pearson.

Douglas soon an evil, he complains of it, but he pulls back from the fight which McCarthy boldly began, knowing that he would be smeared by every knave in the congress and in the corps of Senators.

Senator Douglas thought President Truman's letter to a journalist who withheld from him his daughter's name which she did not deserve was a gross exaggeration of a trivial indiscretion. He should have known better.

In New York of recent times the same tendency has been expressed in the courts of Communist cases. In the first trial of her friend, Alger Hiss, charged by constructive implication with treason against the United States, Eleanor Roosevelt flagrantly interfered to say:

"Day by day, as the defense attorney in the trial of Alger Hiss brings out facts about Whitaker Chambers as a witness, one cannot help being mystified as to why the gentleman should be believed at all. He has now admitted that he perjured himself before the grand jury and before the house."

Sugar Ray
Takes Another
Big Victory

New York, Jan. 10 — (AP) — Well-known Champion Sugar Ray Robinson defeated another prizefighter today — the Edward J. Neil memorial plaque.

Robinson was honored last night at the annual dinner of the New York Boxing Writers' association, receiving the award as the most deserving fighter for advancement of the sport during 1950. Joe Louis, an old friend of Robinson's, presented the plaque as some 300 guests looked on at the Waldorf-Astoria.

The award, presented annually since 1939, is in memory of Neil, a correspondent in the Spanish civil war.

Robinson recently completed a European tour during which he won five fights.

Victorious in all 10 starts last year, Sugar Ray fought mostly middleweights and won the Pennsylvania version of the world middleweight title by defeating Robert Villanar at Philadelphia. He defended his better known for championship against Charlie Frazier, Robinson is slated to meet Jake LaMotta for the middleweight title at Chicago Feb. 19.

The James A. Walker memorial award for service to the sport over a period of years was presented to Wilbur Wood, sports editor of the now defunct New York Sun, by James A. Farley, former chairman of the New York State Athletic commission.

Heavyweight Champion Ezzard Charles received a championship belt and Ring magazine's medal as "fighter of the year" from Ring Editor Nat Fleischer. Charles won the belt last year.

Robinson, in receiving the plaque, paid tribute to his friend and long-time idol, Louis, whom he referred to as his "inspiration."

committee on un-American activities. He seems to have no hesitancy about telling unsavory facts about his private life which make him seem less and less valuable as a witness. One feels the feeling that Mr. Chambers is on trial and not Mr. Hiss.

On the contrary, "one" got "the feeling" that Eleanor Roosevelt was on trial along with Alger Hiss, for he was her friend and her late husband's accomplice in historic affairs which yet may have to have sealed the doom of the United States. Moreover, Chambers told "unsavory facts" about his private life as a patriotic sacrifice whereas this woman told many revolting facts about her family not for any patriotic purpose but to make money out of her books. But the final fact of this citation is that she wrote this plea to reach the notice of the jury, knowing that an uncertain proportion of the American people are incapable of intelligent judgment when the name of "Roosevelt" is invoked.

The counsel for Hiss ignored this impudence.

But a few days later the same lawyer told the judge that we were paying too high a price for freedom of the press when a factual journalist covering the trial wrote pointedly about the conduct of the judge and justice Felix Frankfurter.

More recently, we had a similar experience in the Remington trial, which is more or less parallel to the Hiss case. William C. Chandler, defending a man who is alleged to have been a communist and to have handed over stolen government documents to a Soviet spy, asked the court to admonish the reporters not to discuss such cases "on the eve and during the course of a criminal trial." In support of his proposal, Chandler cited a magazine article by "former judge Rikkind of this subject, a copy of which is submitted herewith."

The offending truthful pretentious review of the Remington case had been written for the New York Journal-American by Howard Rushmore, formerly a communist and now one of the most effective enemies of the treason in American journalism. The rick-kick referred to quit the federal bench and went straight to the firm of Paul Weiss, Rikkind, Wharton and Garrison.

Paul is Randolph Paul, formerly chief counsel of the treasury under Morgenthau, who composed a statement in which Elliott Roosevelt denied that he ever exploited his old man's position to trim suckers. The occasion was the exposure of Elliott's dead-beat loan of $200,000 from John Hartford.

Weiss was Eleanor Roosevelt's late friend and Marshall Field's late co-sponsor in his sinister career pro-Soviet journalism. He was the brother of Carol Weiss King, the leading lawyer for accused communists. He interfered flagrantly in the first Hiss trial and planted in the court room a psychiatrist, one binger, to discredit Chambers as the principal accuser of Eleanor Roosevelt's guilty friend. Hiss, Binger's wife is the sister of the Garrison whose name winds up the interesting roster of this strange group. And Garrison, for a long time, has been active in the adjudication of massive union disputes involving communist influence of ominous import to the stability of the United States of America.

SPORTS ROUNDUP

By Hugh Fullerton, Jr.

Dallas, Jan. 9 — (AP) — Billy Rose used to say "Dallas for education; Fort Worth for fun" before the days when these two cities were running rival positions. And its old bunch that a number of educators may acquire some political education before the National Collegiate A. A. conventions ends here Saturday.

It's just speculation, of course, and we've been unduly suspicious of convention maneuvering ever since the late Judge Bramham disintegrated the votes of a lot of incoherent voters to gain a temporary victory in one of baseball's big battles some years ago. But after thumbing through a lot of fine print, here's what we figure could happen.

Amendments Against The Boys
Gossip we hear is that no effort will be made to discipline any schools for non-compliance with the ban on smoking until there's an attempt to make the code easier to comply with. . . . This would come under the completely revised constitution and by-laws that are up for adoption and the various proposed constitutional amendments.

Presumably the simplest way would be first to adopt the new set of laws and then proceed to amend them, especially since the amendments then come under the by-laws, which can be altered by a mere majority vote instead of two-thirds. . . . But the new constitution states that amendments can be voted on only if they have been submitted two months before the convention, instead of three weeks as at present, and mailed to the members six weeks in advance.

The same restrictions apply to those articles in the by-laws government financial aid and recruiting. . . . Two very similar amendments were included in the NCAA notice dated Dec. 1, 1950, weren't submitted until after conference meetings in December.

So it seems if the dissident members vote to make changes, they'll automatically shut themselves out from making the ones they want for another year.

One of the gents concerned, slightly surprised at such a suggestion, remarked: "I don't think it will be that way. Compliance comes under the head of old business."

One Affirmative Vote
With Kansas State's basketball setting a hot pace for their big seven rivals, Business Manager Fritz Knorr has found that even the new 13,000 capacity field house isn't big enough for all the fans who want to see the Wildcats play Kansas U. next month.

But can't be as inadequate as old Nichols gym. . . . A couple of years ago K. State was campaigning for the field house and invited all the state legislators to see the Missouri game. . . . To make the impression stronger, students stood in line, warming themselves by open fires and nibbling lunches, even those of getting into the gym.

When the game started, the players were virtually in the spectators' laps and vice versa. . . . At the first time out, Sparky Stalecup, Missouri coach, drew his boys into a huddle for instruction when the K-State cheerleaders raced on the floor and shouted: "All together. We want a field house. . . . Sparky looked up and exclaimed: 'I'll join that cheer.' . . . And he did, leaving his boys flat footed while he went through the motions with the yell leaders.

Major General Dean was commander of the 24th Infantry Division last July when his outfit fought the holding action at Place. When marching a rattling fire and overwhelming numbers of the enemy pushed the division out of burning Tadjon, he stayed with the last units of the rear guard. Besides directing action, he joined in it. He knocked out a tank with a bazooka. In the evacuation, he backpacked a wounded man up a steep hill, then went back to search for other wounded. He didn't come back.

When the supply of grenades ran low, he went out into the line and threw his own grenades from dead enemy soldiers. He killed three Communists who jumped him. Six Communists started lobbing grenades into an American machine gun position. Watkins, already wounded in the head, stood up in his foxhole. Machine gun fire chopped into his back bone. He returned the fire, killed all six. Then, paralyzed from the waist down, he collapsed into the foxhole. There he lay for two more days, calling out "hang on fellows now kill me for me." When it became apparent help wouldn't arrive, he ordered his men to abandon the position. He wouldn't let them try to carry him back. He just grinned and wished them luck on their trip.

Lieutenant Henry sacrificed himself to cover the withdrawal of his platoon, a unit of company F, 38th Infantry regiment, near An-Dong on Sept. 1. A sergeant who was there told the story: "A bunch of North Koreans attacked our position. We fought the enemy a long time. There were bullets and shells falling all around. Our ammunition was running low. Lt. Henry sent me out after the guns and ammunition of the wounded. Washington, Jan. 9 — (AP) — There were priceless decorations today for five soldiers who could not be here to receive from President Truman the medal on the blue star-streaked ribbon which bears the single word "Valor."

Some of the recipients of the medal of honor died while doing the deeds for which they won it. The Korean war the highest military decoration this nation can confer. And some are missing. Perhaps they will come back. . . .

So the President awarded to five, the medals to the widows or the wives or the parents of the general, the private first class, the sergeant, the first lieutenant, the master sergeant. . . . a cross section of all the valiant men who fight wars.

Let's not take them by rank, because courage above and beyond the call of duty is not the peculiar attribute of class or seniority of service.

The five are Pfc. Melvin L. Brown, of Mahaffey, Pa.; Maj. Gen. William F. Dean, of Berkeley, Calif.; Master Sgt. Travis E. Watkins, of Gladewater, Tex.; 2d Lt. Frederick F. Henry, of Clinton, Okla.; and Sgt. 1st Class Charles W. Turner, of Boston.

Pfc. Brown, 21, of Company D, 8th engineer combat battalion, is missing. Standing on top of a 50-foot high enclosure near Kansas, the "walled city" of Korea on Sept. 4, Brown held off savagely attacking Communist soldiers so his platoon could get into a defensive position to beat off the attackers. He fired all his ammunition, threw all his grenades. He was wounded seriously. When no other weapon was left he pulled a shot from his pack and crushed the skull of each enemy soldier who tried to mount the wall. He seemed to be firing every-

NCAA May Eliminate
Black List

By HAROLD V. RATLIFF

Dallas, Jan. 10 — (AP) — Four schools may be removed from the National Collegiate Athletic association black list today while the way has been opened for six others to possibly escape going on the list for violation of the sanity code governing financial aid to athletes.

The powerful 17-man NCAA council, highest authority except the NCAA convention itself, holds its first meeting and one of its duties will be to determine if four unnamed schools, given until today to comply with the code, have done so. NCAA President Hugh Whitely explained that they had expressed hope of attaining compliance and if they now are found in that category will not be brought before the convention Friday and Saturday.

He said the six other schools, also unnamed had expressed hope of compliance, thus they will be subject to suspension by the committee of the NCAA, meeting yesterday, set the order of business before the convention to place the question of the schools' suspension after a vote on five amendments to the NCAA constitution that would soften the code. If an amendment is passed the schools might then be in compliance and it is doubtful if they would be brought up for disciplinary action.

The amendments range from taking enforcement of the code out of the hands of the NCAA and placing it with the individual schools and conferences to allowing a boy everything he needs just so a full report subject to everybody's scrutiny is made. The present rule calls for a boy to work for everything above tuition and fees.

The American Association of College Baseball Coaches, which yesterday called for continuance of the agreement with professional baseball prohibiting signing a high school boy to a contract before his class graduates, met today with the subject of pro baseball raiding college campus the major topic. The high school agreement expires this year. The coaches went pro baseball to also lay off their players until their classes have graduated. The baseball coaches also voted for a try-out of a rule under which a player can appear in the lineup more than once per game, this being an aid to schools with small squads. The Middle Atlantic States conference will furnish the trial.

The lamination but—wood layers glued together instead of solid wood—was adopted as an economic measure. Breakage of this but, the coaches say, is virtually nothing.

A proposal from Cracker Brown of Northeast Louisiana State college that colleges sign athletes to contracts at a consideration of $1.00 so they could not be signed to pro contracts was tabled pending a check into the legality of such action.

Tech Continues
Winning Ways
in AIC Play

By The Associated Press

Two undefeated teams in the Arkansas Intercollegiate conference stayed that way last night. Loop-leading Arkansas Tech made it five conference victories against no defeats in a 67-48 win over College of the Ozarks at Clarksville.

The Mountaineers guarded Tech's Edward Dopsen, leading AIC scorer, so closely that he made only four field goals. However, Teammate Baker took over to score 20 points and lead both teams. Ozarks' Rex Verby was close behind with 20.

Magnolia A. and M. ran its conference string to three by downing Arkansas Teachers, 86-60, at Magnolia. The Muleriders also are undefeated in play. They were paced by Calvin Thomas, who scored 27 points.

In a third AIC game, Ouachita came from behind in the second half to beat Hendrix, 65-61, at Arkadelphia. C. E. Harris' eight field goals in the second half were largely responsible. Harris led the scoring with 20 points.

New York, Jan. 10 — (AP) — If you can't shake a S. H. man in white, don't expect to beat the Long Island university basketball team. That's what Coach Ed Hickey of St. Louis said before his Billikens met LIU last night. They couldn't stop the Player Hickey called the "best big man in basketball" and unbent Long Island rallied to defeat St. Louis, 74-62, for its 10th straight victory.

Long Island ranks fourth and St. Louis fifth in this week's Associated Press poll of the country's top teams. The way they battled showed why.

The 6-foot-7-inch White proved the difference with 24 points and great rebounding.

St. Louis made up a 11-point deficit early in the second half and led LIU, 46-45, with 11 minutes to go. Ray Sonnenberg, the Billikens left on fouls shortly after the LIU pulled away with 10 straight points. St. Louis now has an 11-2 record.

Duquesne (11-1) surged back from its Cincinnati defeat Monday night to drop LaSalle, 53-43, in a battle of Pennsylvania fives.

Bentley revolved around other espionage groups with which, she said, Remington was not connected.

She said one of these, allegedly headed by Nathan Gregory Silvermaster, provided her with the 12-day European invasion data as well as a tip that the U. S. was about to break a Russian code.

Miss Bentley added that William Ludwig Ullmann, a former treasury department employee and later an air force officer assigned to the Pentagon, told her he obtained the D-day information from a contact in the office of Maj. Gen. John H. Hildring, in charge of the civilian affairs division.

However, she said she was quite certain that no one in Hildring's office intentionally leaked the information.

William C. Chandler, chief of defense counsel, interrupted to say he was the general's deputy at the time, and asked of the leak: "It wasn't me, was it?"

"No, Mr. Chandler," the witness replied with a smile.

Miss Bentley also named Laughlin Currie, a secretary to the late President Roosevelt, as an alleged member of the group she said was headed by Silvermaster.

Truman Is Soft Pedaling Fair Deal Plan

By JAMES MARLOW

Washington, Jan. 9 —(AP)— President Truman is soft-pedaling his "fair deal" program for 1951.

He needs all the support he can get in congress on his foreign program, since congress already is split wide open on that.

Besides, a large part of congress energy this year is going to be needed for international dealings and relations.

In his state of the union message to congress yesterday Mr. Truman seemed very careful not to anger anyone very much about his domestic program.

The whole tone of what he said on domestic affairs was far less aggressive than his state of the union speech in other years.

His Trumanite Democrats in congress are outnumbered by the Republicans and Southern Democrats, any time they team up.

The Republicans are his biggest hurdle on foreign affairs. He'll need to woo the southerners, or at least not push them away from him.

He infuriated them in other years when he plugged for his civil rights program: An anti-lynching law, abolition of the poll tax, and a fair employment practices commission (FEPC).

In his state of the union message last year Mr. Truman said: "I again urge the congress to enact the civil rights proposals I made in February, 1948."

This time neither "urge" nor "civil rights" appeared in his speech. He made oblique reference to the subject in a single sentence: "We must assure equal rights and equal opportunities to all our citizens."

The Taft-Hartley labor law, ever since the Republican-controlled congress passed it in 1947, has been a sore point in congress, busting it wide open.

A promise to wipe it out was one of the main points in Mr. Truman's campaign for the presidency in 1948. Ever since he has urged its repeal.

Last year in his state of the union message he called T-H a "negative" labor law and called on congress to repeal it. Congress didn't.

This time Mr. Truman said action is needed to improve "our labor laws to help provide stable labor-management relations and to make sure that we have steady production in this emergency."

Last year Mr. Truman asked congress to improve social security benefits. Congress did.

This time Mr. Truman seemed to be saying, although it wasn't clear, that old age pensions should be improved further.

This, too, was handled obliquely. But if Mr. Truman was asking for higher old age pensions, congress isn't expected to respond.

And, while in the past Mr. Truman banged away at congress for a compulsory health insurance program, this time he merely said: "We still need to provide insurance against loss of earnings through sickness, and against the high costs of medical care."

Previously Mr. Truman had asked congress to provide federal aid to education. This too had become a sore point.

Yesterday he mentioned this subject by saying something needs to be done to aid "the states to meet the most urgent needs of our elementary and secondary schools."

Then he hastened to add: "Some of our plans will have to be deferred for the time being."

That phrase about deferring "some of our plans for the time being" explained much of the soft-pedal Mr. Truman put on his "fair deal."

For a little later he added: "In the months ahead, the government must give priority to activities that are urgent—like military procurement, and atomic energy and power development."

It seems accurate to read into this a simple conclusion: He's going easy on the "fair deal" now but will return to it when, and if, he can.

Demos Rally in Support of Aid Plan

Washington, Jan. 10 —(AP)— Senate Democrats rallied today to the support of President Truman's program of helping Western Europe.

Chairman Connally (D-Tex.) of the senate foreign relations committee, Senator McFarland of Arizona, the Democratic leader, and Senators Douglas (D-Ill.), McMahon (D-Conn.) and Fulbright (D-Ark.) all went to work on speeches for the foreign policy debate.

To strengthen the President's position — under vigorous attack by some Republicans — Douglas proposed that the senate act affirmatively on the question of furnishing troops for Europe and on defining similar policies in Asia.

"We should affirm the preliminary agreements made at the Brussels conference for the establishment of a European defense force," Douglas said. "I think the President acted under his constitutional powers in that instance and I believe the senate will agree."

Douglas said he wants to reverse the "negative" approach taken by Senator Wherry of Nebraska, the Republican floor leader, in a resolution which would ban the sending of additional American ground troops to Europe without prior approval from congress.

Mr. Truman has said that he doesn't need any further authority from congress to commit more ground forces to Europe. He didn't touch directly on the question in

State Senate to Inspect State Hospital

Little Rock, Jan. 10 —(AP)— The Arkansas senate plans an inspection of the Little Rock unit of the state hospital.

Governor McMath suggested a tour by the legislators after he had referred to "deplorable" conditions in his inaugural speech yesterday and had asked for new taxes to finance rebuilding of the institution.

The senate accepted the invitation for next Monday afternoon. The house didn't consider the invitation yesterday.

The senate yesterday passed senate bill No. 1 — to appropriate $95,000 for its own salary and expenses for this legislative session.

His "state of the union" message Monday.
